Hindu personal law from a women's rights perspective is long-lived, and the American Cancer Society's board of directors established outcome goals for six mission priority areas: lung cancer, tobacco control, increase in tobacco excise taxes in all jurisdictions, and increase the federal excise tax. The population covered by comprehensive smoke-free laws with the ultimate goal of a comprehensive non-preemptive federal smoke-free law, achieving progress in women's empowerment. The case study is part of the ODIS development progress project.

Women's empowerment is presented as a process of personal and social change through which women gain power, meaningful choices, and control over their own lives. The study by Neil et al. (2014) draws on Kabeer (1999) for the examination of the unfolding reform story and what it entailed in terms of successes and challenges for women's rights activists in their pursuit of justice and equality in marriage and divorce rights.

The study started in January 2007 and field data was collected through interviews with female and male plaintiffs, judges, mediation specialists, lawyers, legislators, and 10 legal reform experts. The study focused on women's empowerment and social change. The case of Egypt Mulki al Sharmani demonstrates the ability of effective coalitions to build in MENA countries by linking social and economic development to women's rights. The Moroccan case demonstrates the links among research activism and policy. The study stressed that sustainable development goals cannot be achieved without ensuring gender equality in law and practice.

Colombo, Sri Lanka, while facing many challenges that hinder gender equality is in the process of reforming laws to achieve gender equality and empower women. The country's Minister of Women and Child Affairs, Chandrani Bandara, says that promoting gender equality and women's empowerment should include personal status law, domestic violence, and inheritance reforms. The uniform civil code is the ongoing point of debate within Indian mandate to replace personal laws based on the scriptures and customs of each major religious community in India with a common set of rules governing every citizen personal law reforms and gender empowerment. The gender equality gender mainstreaming financial freedom are the essential aspects of women empowerment. Dr. B.R. Ambedkar, realizing this at his time and included in the process of social reforms, also supported women's rights and initiatives. Effective coalitions can be built in MENA countries by linking social and economic development to women's rights. The Moroccan case demonstrates the links among research activism and policy, women empowerment, and feminist campaigns. Oxford University Press' book explores the issue of gender and law reform with reference to the politics and history of India, also exploring the strategies which could safeguard the rights of women, promoting equal economic independence for women and closing the gender pay gap advancing gender balance in decision making, ending gender-based violence, and promoting gender equality beyond the EU.
